

...en creeps into that her
...y.

LITTLE ENGLAND

THE LITTLE

...
...
...dy
...ife
...ain?
...knew
...etting
...ll the
...a way
...not just
...eone has
...irection.
...o and over

...
...are in
...holders
...in the
...and if
...ability
...the

and Snowy took to it like a duck to water. He was getting itchy feet to make his own world, to create something that was his ... He took some time off and drove around Northern Ireland on his motorbike (he'd got interested in bikes ever since he'd watched the race in every May in Portstewart - one of the principal races in the British calendar) - looking for suitable premises, and estate relatives at the same time. A vast new industrial estate was being built on the outskirts of Derry - and units were for sale at a price he could afford. So, he bought a small studio, making commercials and the bank - opened films ... Getting in commercials and the bank - opened that Snowy was to make a killing ... information dad) stayed with an aunt and uncle. Aunt (like Snowy's growing industry in Ireland) (tourism was a rapidly had a daughter, Margaret, who was Snowy's cousin. They fell for Margaret in a big way ... It took him a long time to get up the courage to make an approach - but, when he did, she seemed to respond. At first the family (on both sides) were two nervous cousins, about the idea of an attraction was a bit nervous, but soon realised there was nothing between them ... As Snowy's business each other, and they could do about it. They liked went from strength to strength (by now he was being asked to make programmes from UTV and BBC-Northern Ireland) so his relationship with Margaret deepened. It was all very chaste, and proper. In matters of the heart thirty-five they were still going out together but there was no sign of a marriage date. By now Snowy was asked by the horns, and proposed. So, Margaret took the bull by the horns, and proposed. Snowy accepted. His father, and proposed. Snowy took so it seemed a good moment for Snowy to return home, visit his dad, and tell both his parents about his decision to get married. While he was back in the North,